The Mural

Once the smell of great food calls you into Dominic's, you'll be captured by the feel of a warm and elegant interior where fine art and family history unfolds. The large mural adds another dimension to your eating experience, giving the impression that you are in an outside cafe looking out over the beautiful Sicilian Coast line.

The colors in the mural are radiant against the ocean background and natural light enters the room from the opening of the large, existing street-side windows, which creates the feel of an open terrace.

Angela wanted to create an atmosphere that expressed her family roots that extended to her customers; as "The food that brings family together."

Painted by Artist Francie Jolin Beaman in 1998, the concept of the dining room was to accentuate this family experience. After Angie provided pictures of her home town, the artist wanted to express more than a view, but a story.

From the window side you'll see a ocean inlet where fisherman come into bay after a long day of fishing. The artist painted her 3 sons, Phillip is fishing, Matt is swimming in the bay and Tim is floating in a boat. Now let your eye gaze toward the center of the mural and you'll see French, Angela's youngest daughter is running her own pub. Gina, the second oldest is sitting on the curb visiting with a friend and Lisa, the oldest daughter is wearing the red dress going into a store. But there is something unusual happening in the mural and the menu; that the artist also designed unbeknownst to her. Just to the very end of mural by the flower stand, you'll see an outline of a young man that looks just like David, Gina's husband. It was painted before David started working at Dominic's where he met Gina and married in 2009.

Another interesting tidbit. The artist didn't realize that she was drawing these particular people. So it was quite a surprise to see how these hand drawn characters turned into the very people who helped create Dominic's Restaurant. Michael, Angela's son, who was very young at the time and not old enough to work at the restaurant, soon will be painted into the mural as well. So keep an eye out.

The Logo is a drawing of a man popping a cork with his side kick, "the ant", is inspired by a man name Michael, an Italian immigrant, whom we called PaPa. Over the back booth, there is a heavy set man with a twinkle in his eye, walking down the street in the mural who is the artist's brother, Alex - who inspired her to paint. The pillars and columns were fauxed by the artist and the beautiful stained glass window was created by her husband, Paul.

Now that your a part of the Dominic's family perhaps you'll see yourself in one of the pictures.
